Valuation Approaches and its application:

By its nature, valuation work cannot be regarded as an exact science, and given the same set of facts and using the same assumptions; expert opinion may differ due to the number of separate judgments, and decisions, which have to be made. Therefore, there can be no standard formulae to establish an indisputable value, although certain appropriate formulae are useful in establishing reasonableness.

Business valuation determines the value of a business enterprise or ownership interest. Valuation estimates the economic benefits that arise from combining a group of physical assets with a group of intangible assets of the business as a going concern.

When valuation is done with the purpose of merger or purchase, it estimates the price that prospective informed buyers and sellers would negotiate at arm's length for an entire business or partial equity interest. There are various methods adopted for valuation of share. Each approach proceeds on different methods adopted for valuation of share. Each method proceeds on different fundamental assumptions which have greater or lesser relevance and at times even no relevance to a given situation. The methods used for the theoretical valuation arrived at has to be perfected with market criteria, as the final purpose is usually to determine potential market prices. The various methods are discussed hereunder:

Income Approach (Discounted Cash Flow Method):

The Income Approach measures the value of an asset by calculating the present value of its future economic benefits. When used to determine Equity value, the Income Approach develops an indication of value by discounting forecasted cash flows to their present value at a rate of return that incorporates the risk-free rate for the use of funds plus the expected rate of inflation and the risks associated with the particular investment. The discount rate applied to these expected cash flows is generally based upon rates of return available from alternative investments of similar type and quality. Another discounting method calculates the company's Weighted Average Cost of Capital ("WACC") from its cost of debt and cost of equity. Forecasts typically cover three to five years, but the reliability of forecasts for valuation purposes in early-stage enterprises depends upon many factors, such as the company's vulnerability to advances in technology, actions by competitors, changes in end-user requirements, and the availability of financing. Selecting the forecast period requires my judgment.

The Income Approach works best when development stage companies have progressed to Stage five Resource Maturity Stage of a company in which company has the staff and financial resources to engage in detailed operational and strategic planning. Typically, companies in prior stages have limited operating histories and cash flow forecasts. Using the Income Approach when a company has not achieved profitability or positive cash flow, and therefore has negative flows/losses during some or all of the forecast years, results in an equity Value that consists mostly (if not entirely) of the Terminal Value ("TV" is the estimate of the Company's future value at the end of the forecast period). Due to these limitations, either the Income Approach is employed in conjunction with the Market Approach or some other sanity checks are needed to be performed.

Market Approach:

The Market Approach measures the value of an asset through an analysis of recent sales of comparable property compared to the property being valued. When applied to the valuation of an equity interest, consideration is given to the financial condition and operating performance of the subject company compared to either publicly traded companies with similar lines of business or recent corporate acquisitions ("Guideline Companies"). Typically, the companies selected for comparison are subject to economic, political, competitive, and technological factors that correspond with those confronting the Company. The Market Approach is conceptually preferable to the other two approaches both because it uses direct comparisons to similar enterprises and because the analysis is based upon actual market transactions. However, comparable that fit perfectly rarely exist. Privately held companies are compared to publicly traded ones that are typically further along in their stage of development, have superior access to capital, and have common stock that is readily marketable.

Often historical results of public companies are being compared to projected results for the private company being valued. In order to reflect these differences, data from the Guideline Companies must be appropriately adjusted. Selecting the market multiple to apply to the Company requires judgment.

Asset Approach:

The general principle behind asset-based valuation methods is that the value of an enterprise is equal to the Fair market value of its assets less the Fair market value of its liabilities. The Fair market values of the component assets and liabilities may themselves be obtained or estimated using a variety of methods, including market- based or income-based methods. The asset-based approach is most useful when applied to tangible assets and to companies whose assets consist primarily of tangible assets. This approach establishes value based on the cost of reproducing or replacing each asset, less depreciation from physical deterioration and functional obsolescence.

The asset-based approach is applied primarily to enterprises in Stage 1 and some enterprises in Stage 2, before the company is likely to have built substantial intangible value. There is limited or no basis to apply a market- or income-based approach, since there are unlikely to be comparable market transactions, and the company has virtually no financial history and therefore is unable to use past results to reasonably support a forecast of future results.

Rationale for Choice of Valuation Method:

In determining the enterprise Value of RBEP, since the company does not have any active business, we have dealt only with audited financial statements provided by the Company, hence used Assets Approach but as Net Assets Value Basis (wherever applicable).
